(By Associated Press)

Manila, P. I., April 2.—15,000 persons were rendered homeless by a fire last night, the most destructive here in more than 20 years, which destroyed 3,000 houses in the northern section of the city, a native quarter, known as the San Lazaro district.

Two bodies were found today in the ruins.

WANT COLUMBUS WOMAN NAMED

(By Associated Press)

Washington, April 2.—Senator Willis and Attorney General Price of Ohio called today on President Harding to urge appointment of Miss Lucile Atcherson, of Columbus, to a diplomatic post, preferably one at the Paris embassy. They said both the president and Myron T. Herrick had approved such a nomination.

Miss Atcherson is now engaged in relief work in France.

He was taken to a hospital suffering from a broken collar bone and fractured ribs.

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, April 2.—Formation of the Farmers' Federal Tax League of America, which will oppose the federal sales tax, was announced today by Eugene Frey, of Argyle, Ill., secretary and treasurer of the organization.

George F. Comings, former lieutenant governor of Wisconsin, is president of the league.

"Powerful interests," said Mr. Frey, "are preparing to shift further the burden of taxation upon the farmers, and the farmers must organize to make their influence felt if this attempt is to be prevented."

EX-EMPEROR CHARLES III REPORT SAYS

Entene Circles Inclined To Doubt Honesty of Report

(By Associated Press)

Steinamanger, Hungary, April 3.—Former Emperor Charles is ill with bronchitis. He is suffering from fever and is having nervous coughing attacks, according to a bulletin issued today by his Budapest physician.

The bulletin says the former King has no appetite and that he is obliged to remain in bed.

DOUBT REPORT

(By Associated Press)

Vienna, April 3.—Former Emperor Charles is ill at Steinamanger, according to a report here. The report is coupled with request for an allied physician to go to Steinamanger.

There is some inclination here to regard the indisposition of Charles as order that the former emperor may obtain a further delay in leaving Steinamanger.

The postponement in the departure of Charles is beginning to cause irritation here as well as in Prague and Belgrade.

Count Andraessy is said to be actively trying to save the day for the Hapsburgs by inducing Charles to abdicate in favor of Archduke Otto, his nine-year-old son, under a regency.

AL. G. FIELDS PASSES AWAY

(By Associated Press)

Columbus, April 3.—Alfred Griffin ("Al G.") Fields, 72, premier of American minstrelsy, died at his home here today, his death resulting from Bright's disease, against which he had made a long fight.

After spending the early part of his life as a farmer and banker, Mr. Fields in 1886 entered the theatrical business, organizing a minstrel show which has operated during every consecutive year since. The funeral will be held here Tuesday afternoon.

Series of Conferences Indicate Action On Great Questions

Knox and Herrick Among Visitors At White House

Object of Viviani's Visit Becoming Apparent

French Journalist Interviews Harding

(By Associated Press)

Wash., April 2.—Interest in the administration's attitude toward the general subject of a peace settlement revived by the visit here of former Premier Viviani of France, was further intensified today by a series of conferences which had every outward appearance of embracing a general discussion to prepare administration officials for a decision on such subjects as a separate peace resolution and an amended League of Nations.

The day's developments centered about the White House and state departments leaving Viviani for the moment in the background. It was indicated, however, that the discussions in progress might have been a logical sequence to suggestions brought here by the former French Premier.

One of the first callers at the White House today was Colonel George Harvey, of New York, selected for ambassador to Great Britain. After a half hour with the president, Colonel Harvey conferred with Secretary Hughes at the State Department.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, author of the separate peace resolution vetoed by President Wilson also was on President Harding's list of callers today as was Stephanie Lauzanne, a French journalist.

Still another on the White House engagement list was Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, understood to be under serious consideration for ambassador to France.

Mr. Herrick held that post in the early days of the European war and last summer familiarized himself with recent developments by a visit to Europe during which he conferred with many British and French statesmen.

The impression that important developments might be brewing under the surface was strengthened by dispatches from Paris which suggested that the French Foreign office was expecting some announcement to come soon from Secretary Hughes.

Such information as President Harding has gathered regarding the wishes and opinions of Mr. Viviani has come to him indirectly thus far, the former French Premier having been only a few minutes with the President when he formally presented a message of greeting several days ago. He will be the President's guest, however, at a white house dinner Wednesday night at which Mr. Herrick will also be present.

BURIAL OF RENOWNED NATURALIST IS SIMPLE

John Burroughs is Laid to Rest in Bosom of His Beloved Catskills.

(By Associated Press)

Roxbury, N. Y., April 3.—John Burroughs was laid to rest this afternoon on the mountain side where he was born exactly 84 years ago today.

From the peaks of and the valleys of his beloved Catskill Mountains came hundreds of neighbors to pay him the final honors. Others from far off corners of the nation joined them at the grave of the great naturalist.

All morning and in the early afternoon the slope down the two miles of rocky mountain to Roxbury was dotted with groups of villagers trudging upward to the burial spot.

Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford and Harvey S. Firestone, three of his closest friends, were present at the services. (The burial services were simple. There were a few short prayers, followed by the recitation of poems, after which the casket was lowered into the grave.)

(By Associated Press)

West Park, N. Y., April 2.—In the rustic house that was the retreat of John Burroughs for nearly half a century, 150 representatives of the thousands of nature lovers who admired his outdoor life and writings gathered today at his funeral. The ceremonies were short, of great simplicity, and reminiscent of the career which the great naturalist pursued among the hills and streams and flowers and beside his rugged stone hearth.

Noted scientists and manufacturers mingled in sorrow with Boy Scouts and the children of the neighborhood. Publishers and horticulturists bowed reverent heads with a group of religious men from the Holy Cross Monastery. The mourners came from among the rocks and rills of New England, the banks of the Potomac, the shores of Lake Michigan, the snows of Canada and the great stone buildings of New York to look for the last time upon the patriarchal countenance of the venerable naturalist.

Among them were Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford and Harvey S. Firestone, who for several years have spent their vacations outdoors with Mr. Burroughs. Next to Mr. Edison stood an aged and gray-haired man who had pedaled his bicycle from Binghamton, more than 300 miles away to witness the epilogue of the great naturalist's stay upon the earth that he loved so fervently. The man was Charles C. Branham, an acquaintance of the naturalist since childhood days.

The sun was shining brilliantly and the pines at Riverby murmured sadly in the breezes from the Catskill, when the funeral services began. From a muffled phonograph came the soft violin strains of Pissutti's "Remembrance." The Lord's Prayer was said and then slowly a reader spoke some lines written by Earl W. Williams, which Mr. Burroughs felt characteristic of his own self.

"The forest nods in fellowship," they read, "the winds my playmates are; the waters lisp the signs of brotherhood, and in the thunder's voice I hear a tongue which is not wholly strange. The stars are kindly counsellors to me; I claim a kinship with the worm that crawls, and with the clay wherein the simple tale of its dim life is written."

Quotation from Emerson and Wordsworth and Walt Whitman, companion of his middle-age, also were read. Then William Ormiston Roy of Montreal, a friend of Mr. Burroughs through many years, read excerpts from "Waiting," one of the first poems penned by the naturalist, and from "Accepting the Universe," his latest book.

Rev. Franklin D. Elmer, pastor of Collegiate Baptist Church, at Colgate University, likewise a long-time friend, led the prayers and made a few remarks.

Tomorrow, Mr. Burroughs' eighty-fourth birthday, his body will be taken by automobile into the western Catskills and interred at the place where he was born, near the town of Roxbury. Many of those who attended his funeral today will go to "Woodchuck Lodge," his den in the mountains, for the service.

POLITICAL UPRISING IN HUNGARY PREVENTED

Efforts of Former Emperor Charles Blocked

Will Return to Switzerland Without Delay

Will Leave Hungary Under Heavy Guard

(By Associated Press)

Paris, April 2.—Dispatches received by the French Foreign Office today indicate that former Emperor Charles, who, in the belief of official circles here, has been successfully blocked in his efforts at restoration to the throne of Hungary, will be escorted back to Switzerland by Allied officials. This guard will be given him, it is said, to protect him against manifestations enroute.

Switzerland is expected to again extend hospitality to the ex-monarch, but with stricter limitations as to his place of residence and movement.

OPTIMISTIC OVER IRISH SITUATION

(By Associated Press)

Dublin, April 3.—The opinion was expressed today by competent observers that the Irish situation had undergone a considerable change for the better since St. Patrick's Day.

Today's predictions that there will be a settlement of the controversy in the near future are universal. Outwardly, conditions have not improved.

Factors serving to stimulate the optimistic view of the situation are the frank admissions of Premier Lloyd George of the government's failure to solve the Irish problem; the appointment of the Catholic viceroy; Eamonn de Valera's latest pronouncements which are interpreted as showing the willingness of the Sinn Fein for what is deemed a reasonable compromise; England's international troubles; the significance attached in Ireland to the report of the American Committee of one Hundred; President Harding's reported indorsement of the American Relief Commission's campaign and a rumor that United States Senator Kenyon is coming to Ireland as President Harding's representative to make an investigation.

SECOND BAPTIST CHURCH.

The new methods of church work are having a marked effect on church architecture. Churches built years ago are totally unsuited to the busy life of the modern house of God.

For more than a month the Building committee consisting of E. Branks, S. Harris, G. Woods, F. Cole, B. Hurley, Mrs. C. Wingo and E. Thornton have been at work with Architect J. S. Williams of this city in embodying the above feature in their new church.

The Second Baptist church will soon begin building a new church, modern in every respect.

It will be located on Columbus ave.

SEED CORN TEST ADVOCATED BY VOCATIONAL MAN

Points to Folly of Planting Corn Without Known germination Power.

Prof. J. A. Harbaugh, instructor of the Vocational Agriculture Classes of the Washington High School, is calling the attention of the farmers of Fayette county to the value of seed corn testing. Proof of his assertions have been founded on experiments and tests of a practically nature.

Prof. Harbaugh says:

A question which should be of vital importance to farmers practically everywhere in Ohio at present is:

"Will my seed corn grow this year?"

"For years past it seems to have been a common habit for farmers to close their eyes to the actual condition of their seed corn before planting, take a 'running chance,' plant it anyhow and then try to make up for their folly by the old time custom of replanting.

"Reports coming in from various parts of the state to Ohio State University on the seed corn condition have been so unfavorable that the Farm Crops Department has asked the county agents and vocational agricultural teachers to make tests or send in results of tests already made on the germinating qualities of seed corn in their community.

"Of course some farmers still take 100 grains from their seed corn, sprout it and get what they call the percentage of germination but here is where the value of the test stops (if there is any value to it). It is quite possible to get 100 grains by accident of the many thousands of grains to be planted, and again if those 100 grains test only 75 per cent he still had to plant the 25 per cent which will not grow along with the other or discard the whole of his seed corn.

"Yes! Many farmers can take a knife and tell whether a grain of corn is dead or not, but no man living can look at the germ and tell whether that germ will produce a good strong 'shoot' or not, the only kind which is apt to bear an ear of corn which is worth husking.

"That leaves only two ways to test seed corn for germination then. First: Plant it in the corn field and see if it will grow. Second: Test each ear of corn individually in a germination tester. Before selecting which one of these methods you will use remember that the corn field is an expensive germination tester and has to be done at one of the busy seasons of the year while the second method is much cheaper and may be carried out during the evenings and on bad days of the winter and spring months.

"Last season one of the boys in the vocational agricultural classes of the local high school raised ten acres of corn in a part of one of his father's field, using the same kind of seed his father used, planting it at the same time as his father, with the same planter and under the same conditions, excepting that the boy tested each ear of his corn individually, while the father did not.

"The writer of this article stood at the edge of the father's field and counted ten hills completely missing within a radius of 30 to 40 yards. In walking from one corner of the boy's field to the opposite corner diagonally across the field there was only one hill found missing.

In the test made at the Agricultural Department in the high school this spring, 600 ears were tested, which were selected last fall and stored properly all winter. A moisture test was made of all the corn and none tested above 17 per cent before storing for the winter; also 100 ears husked last fall and stored in a crib over winter, and 100 ears which stood in the shock all winter.

The result of the test was as follows:

600 ears, fall selected, 82.8 per cent good ears; 17.2 per cent bad 100 ears, crib corn, 53.0 per cent good ears; 47.0 per cent bad. 100 ears, corn from shock, 53.0 per cent good ears; 47 per cent bad. "The first test was made by the class and the last two by two different boys at the same time.

"The thing simmers down to this question for the farmer; "Am I going to take what seems to be a poor chance or am I going to play safe and eliminate the chance of having to replant right at the time I should be doing something else?"

FARMERS READY FOR REAL DRIVE

Fayette county farmers are looking forward to the coming week with the intention of beginning their spring work in real earnest, and expect to be planting corn within the next thirty days.

During the intervening thirty days the farmers will spend ever moment possible breaking ground and doing the other spring work preparatory to seeding time.

Outsowing has been under way and a large acreage is indicated. Rebuilding fences, completion of corn husking, looking after the spring pigs and dozens of kindred affairs are occupying attention in addition to the spring plowing.

There will be no decreased acreage in Fayette county, it is believed, and the outlook for large acreages in all crops is unusually favorable, more abundant farm labor and decreased wages being encouraging factors to the farmers generally.

CHILLICOTHE BOUND TRAFFIC TO DETOUR

Tourists going to the hills Sunday must avoid the Chillicothe pike below Frankfort, was the advice given out by the Fayette County Automobile Club Saturday.

While the improvement of the pike from Frankfort to Chillicothe is being completed, the section below Frankfort is closed to traffic.

Detour may be made by way of New Holland over the Circleville pike to Clarksburg and from there to Chillicothe.

ADVENTISTS WILL HOLD MISSIONARY CONVENTION HERE

Seventh-Day Adventists will hold a Laymen's Home Missionary Convention in their church on Broadway and Hopkins streets.

The meetings began Friday night and continue Saturday night and Sunday. The public is specially invited to attend Sunday night meeting, when E. R. Corder will speak on the subject, "Sunday Blue Laws: Are They Right or Wrong?"

The convention instructors will be: C. T. Redfield and C. E. Reichenbaugh Home Missionary Secretary and Assistant Secretary of Mt. Vernon Ohio, and E. R. Corder, Assistant Secretary of the Columbus Union. Mr. O. E. Fultz is the local leader.

It is the aim of these workers to teach the laymen of the local church how to do more successful soul-saving work. Adventists say their goal is, "The advent message to all the world in this generation."

In working toward this mark, the denomination claims unusual progress since its beginning in 1844, when it had but a few followers. Now there are 183,000 Seventh-Day Adventists in the world, and their missionaries have entered practically every inhabited country. To supply the increasing need for workers throughout the field, the denomination is relying largely on its 77 colleges and academies, and 850 primary schools for trained men and women. Adventists believe the evangelization of the world will be accomplished largely through the printed page. They have 41 publishing houses and branches, which in 1920, issued over $5,000,000 worth of religious literature in 94 languages.

The sanitariums and treatment rooms of this people number 46. The local conferences provide medical secretaries who train the laity how to give simple treatments. Since 1913 the Sabbath schools of the denomination have been giving their offerings to foreign missions. These schools alone gave over $1,000,000 of the $2,362,000 Adventists gave to foreign missions in 1920. Some of the prominent teachings of the Seventh-day Adventists are: The near, visible, personal and literal return of Jesus to the earth, yet without setting a date for that event, the observance of the seventh day of the week—Saturday—as the Sabbath, and the complete separation of the church and state.

Germany may be short of gold, but she is long on brass.

BIRD LOVERS HIKE TO TWO-MILE BRIDGE

More than a score of Y. W. C. A. members hiked to the two-mile bridge on the Chillicothe pike Saturday morning at half-past five o'clock in the first event of the season, under the auspices of the Recreation-Health department.

It was known as a "Bird Hike" and included in the party was Rev. Karl B. Alexander, who has made a special study of bird life and pointed out the different species. Fifteen different species were seen.

Appetites whetted keen by the early morning exercise were satisfied with a breakfast prepared over a big fire by the members of the committee in charge, Mrs. Ed Fife, the chairman. The menu included bacon and eggs, sandwiches, hot coffee, cinnamon rolls and oranges.

The party returned to this city shortly after eight o'clock.

DEATH COMES TO MRS. GEORGE JAMES

A large circle of relatives and many friends are deeply saddened to learn of the death of Mrs. George James, (nee Margaret Stuckey), at her home in Indianapolis, Ind., Saturday morning at six o'clock.

Mrs. James has been ill with sleeping sickness for the past two months, during which time her mother, Mrs. M. F. Stuckey, has been with her.

Mrs. Glenn Rodgers, a sister, but lately returned home from a stay of five weeks, received word Thursday evening that Mrs. James was sinking rapidly, and left for Indianapolis Friday morning.

Mrs. James' home was in this city before her marriage, and early friendships were retained during frequent visits here, so that there is much personal grief besides the warm sympathy which goes out to her family in their great loss.

She is survived by her husband, one son, Richard, her mother, Mrs. Stuckey, and three sisters, Mrs. Russell C. Evick of Columbus; Mrs. Fred Schmidt of Springfield, and Mrs. Rodgers, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Rowe received a telegram Saturday noon announcing the hour of Mrs. James' death and stating that the body would be brought here Monday.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

HARTMAN THEATER COLUMBUS OHIO

Thursday night, April 7, brings to the Hartman Theater, Columbus, O., the very welcome return of that splendid actor, William Faversham, in "The Prince and the Pauper," a beautiful play, dramatized by Amelie Rives (Princess Troubetzky) from the fascinating story by Mark Twain. The engagement is for three nights and a Saturday matinee, and mail orders should be sent at once. Mr. Faversham has been playing in New York all of this season and has been the recipient of more genuine praise for giving us this charming story than any attraction in many years. The play has been given a sumptuous production by Lee Shubert, who is directing Mr. Faversham's tour and a cast has been provided thoroughly in keeping with the requirements of the story. The company includes Ruth Findlay, Mary Rehan, Madeleine King, Diana Bourbon, Frederick Lloyd, Lowden Adams, John Anthony, Walter Sherwin, P. Gatenby Bell and Cecil Yapp. The famous artist, Rollo Peters, is responsible for the splendid scenic production.

Small bags fertilizer for lawns, gardens and fruit trees in stock.

SAY BOLSHEVISTS CAUSE RAIL TIE-UP

LISBON. (By Mail)—The police claims to have discovered evidence that the strike on the Southern Railway lines which has been in progress for several months has been conducted under the secret direction of Portuguese Bolsheviks.

They have arrested, as one of Bolshevik strike directors, Miguel Correia, a former railway employee and said to be one of the most active propagandists of Bolshevism in Portugal. The police had long been searching for Correia who some time ago was arrested in Spain as a Bolshevik agitator and brought to Lisbon by two Americans, belonging to the International Police, but who was set free.

Correia was captured at a meeting of workers along with a lot of evidence showing that the committee in charge of the railway strike had been financed by profiteering merchants in the towns affected by the strike. The purpose of these merchants is alleged to have been to prevent the shipment of supplies into their provinces so as to enable them to charge extortionate prices.

edy methods and his inimitable manner of handing laughs to an audience, comes to the Hartman for an engagement of three days beginning Monday, April 11, in "The Hottentot," one of the biggest successes of his successful career. Mr. Collier, who is enroute to the Pacific Coast, will be seen at the Hartman with his New York cast, under the management and direction of Sam H. Harris. The author of "The Hottentot" are Victor Mapes and Mr. Collier himself, the play getting its name from a race horse which the comedian is supposed to ride, although he is, in reality, very much afraid of horses. This situation gives rise to many extremely laughable episodes, as may be anticipated. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

The remainder of the week of April 11, beginning on Thursday, April 14, will find Hartman audiences delighted by that famous comedian of bon hue, Bert Williams, in George LeMaire's famous "Broadway Brevities." This big Winter Garden entertainment comes widely and warmly heralded.

J. D. Post

By the death of J. D. Post, Friday, this community loses a citizen who has, for years, been a leader of or prominently identified with, many of our important activities. His loss will be deeply felt in professional business, and financial circles. Few men indeed, in the history of the community, have been so forceful and energetic in public affairs and private activities as Mr. Post has been during the many years he has resided in Washington.

He was an unusually successful lawyer, having the rare, but exceedingly desirable faculty of combining his legal learning, experience and skill with excellent business judgment. During all his long practice at the local bar Mr. Post, as the senior member of the firm of Post and Reid, was engaged in very few "forlorn hope" lawsuits.

As a landowner and farmer, also, Mr. Post ranked pre-eminent among the country's successful men and his judgment and advice was sought and followed in financial circles to an extent unusual indeed.

The members of the financial circles are exclusive, and do not, as a rule, consult outsiders. The fact that Mr. Post was so frequently consulted by financiers for many years is a rare tribute to his ability.

Into the realm of politics, also, Mr. Post brought the same good judgment and untiring energy which made his career such a conspicuous success in his profession and in his business activities.

A big outstanding feature in the successful and many-sided career of Mr. Post was the fact that he was always generous—generous with his earnings, generous with his advice, generous in bringing his tireless energy into the service of friends and associates.

The controlling rule of his life seems to have been to do whatever he undertook as thoroughly, as well and as energetically as he could, and that rule of life applied by him to the talent and the energy, with which nature had endowed him, made of Mr. Post's life the success with which this community closes the chapter of his eventful and useful life.

A Little Exception

Most of us have been taught to appreciate the little things. From early childhood the importance of little things has been preached to us and talked to us, sometimes emphasized with a little deserved punishment until it has become second nature for us to repeat and to believe the old maxim that if we look after the little things the big ones will take care of themselves.

We learned too, along with that other wholesome knowledge that it was an easy task to attend to the little tasks and to guard the little things. And it was, too.

Like all rules, however sound, we Washington and Fayette county folks have proof that there are exceptions.

It is not surprising that grown-up folks and especially city officials should neglect doing little things, but it is rather a jolt to our impressions of long standing that little things are sometimes very difficult to attend to. In fact we here at home have proof that some little things defy all of the Herculean efforts of officials to "do them."

For instance we can do the big things in the way of paving our streets—paving block after block—spend hundreds of thousands of dollars of the people's money, paving streets and the little job of putting in railroad crossings over the B. and O. tracks on Main and Fayette streets has been, for over two years, impossible of performance.

Strange isn't it?

Then, too, there is the precipice in the street at the south end of the Main street bridge. Spending thousands of dollars for a new street and hundreds of dollars for a new floor in the bridge—those big things were easy—but a little task like fixing the bridge approach defies the efforts of our city officials and county commissioners.

It is safe to assert that no other city can show such striking proof of an exception to the age-old maxim.

POETRY FOR TODAY

THE QUEST

Oh, the stars are out, the moon is up,
The woods are thick with night;
But the beckoning road across the hills
Is caught in misted light.

There's silver dust gleams ahead of us,
Shadows under our feet;
And the breeze that blows from far-off fields
Is country fresh and sweet.

Whenever we see a little house
Where firelit windows glow,
We'll stop for a bit and ask our way—
But, ah, they will not know;

For some will say to follow the wind,
Some to follow a star;
But we shall keep to our winding road
Though it may lead us far.

For somewhere it finds a little house,
A friendly open door—
Our house, our hearth, and our own fire light
A flicker on the floor.

TEN YEARS AGO

Herald News This Date 1911

This morning about ten o'clock while Bert Brown, a farm hand, was hauling fodder on the Ed Pfeifer farm four miles north of this city, he was viciously attacked by a huge golden eagle, which fastened its long sharp talons in his clothes and tried to gouge his eyes out with its sharp beak.

The bird was slain with a sled standard after a sharp, fierce struggle, and Brown escaped without injury, but with torn clothes.

SCATTER FLOWERS ON GRAVE OF THIS UNKNOWN SOLDIER

PARIS. (By Mail)—Flowers are brought by an unceasing pilgrimage of mourners and placed on the slab that marks the grave of the unidentified French soldier under the great Arch of Triumph that dominates the western part of the city.

The pile of flowers and wreaths is fed with fresh contributions from early morning until late at night. There seems to be no end to the little ceremonies by organizations held at the grave to honor the war dead. Little shop girls bring small bunches of violets that cost 50 centimes; statesmen passing through Paris place there great wreaths as tributes from their countries.

Since November 11, 1920, when the unknown soldier was placed under the arch, there has always been a group or crowd of mourners at the shrine of the dead. There has always been a huge pile of flowers. On Sundays, thousands stream there from the 12 avenues that converge at the Etoile, as the circular open space surrounding the arch is called and there is a procession of people with bared heads passing by the mound of flowers.

Many teachers bring their classes and there is a movement afoot to arrange that in each of the public schools of Paris a small contribution shall be collected on a separate day in each school to buy flowers to be placed on the slab by a delegation of honor pupils, so that there may be such a tribute of the children of France to the war dead every day in the year.

NEW CABINET ACTS AS BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Splendid Team Work in Administrative Affairs

Hard Work to Find Competent Subordinates

BY MARK SULLIVAN
(Copyright 1921)

Washington, April 2.—If the reader distant from Washington would like to get an impression of how the new administration has taken hold he can have an approximate substitute for such a personal impression in the shape of a summary of the observations of the newspaper men here. The newspaper men see the President and each of the cabinet officials in formal conferences at least once a week and in several cases more frequently. In addition, individual newspaper men have frequent personal contacts with cabinet members.

Out of these conferences and other contacts it is easy to assemble the material for a reasonably accurate impression as to how things are going. In this impression the outstanding feature is what we have all learned, during the war to speak of as "morale."

The cabinet morale is good. Necessarily, it ought to be good. Any new group of men taking hold of a job is fairly certain to start out with fresh enthusiasm, but the particular aspect of morale noticeable in this case is the solidarity and unity of the cabinet as a whole. They are obviously in agreement in practically all questions, obviously eager not to be opinionated or to take stands on personal points of view, anxious to be generously helpful to each other and to contribute everything possible toward success for the administration as a whole.

Of course, men big enough to be cabinet members ought to be all of this under almost any circumstances and yet the fact is it has not always been so in all cabinets. Also it is a fact that President Harding's cabinet includes men of more than usually diverse points of view, of utterly different kinds of training, and experience; and, as in the case of most men with strong personalities, occasionally almost antipathetic to each other.

When the cabinet was being made up any humorist familiar with the prejudices and points of view of the individual members could have got a good deal of fun out of assuming that the cabinet was a club and that any applicant for membership could be kept out, say, two blackballs from the other members. If the cabinet had been made up in that way some fairly startling results might have followed.

Effective Team Work

But the fact is that as things stand today the most obvious feature of the impressions picked up by an observer is the generous and effective team work of the cabinet as a whole. The recollection you have of any conference with a cabinet member is the pleasure he has in his associations, his affection for President Harding, and his zeal for success on the part both of his fellow cabinet members and the administration as a whole.

Next to this, the outstanding impression is that for the present the thing that the various cabinet members are most intent on, and the field in which they have made most progress, is what may be called the government's housekeeping. In getting things cleaned up, in establishing a prompt and orderly routine for the dispatch of business, in getting the desks cleared and in attending with businesslike promptness to things that come up, the cabinet makes an impression which leaves nothing to be desired.

Most of the concrete news coming out of the conferences with the cabinet members is in this field. The other day, for example, President Harding took obvious pride in telling the newspaper men that a businesslike survey of the hospital facilities at the disposition of the government revealed 12,000 additional beds for the use of disabled soldiers.

On another occasion one of the senators from Washington called the attention of the President to the fact that during the following week the government should make a decision involving several million dollars. In this case the government, by an arrangement made at the beginning of the war, had an option either to buy a shipyard on which the government had spent several millions, or not to buy it and to remove and salvage as much as possible of the material and money which the government had spent on the plant. The government appeared to have forgotten the date on which the option expired.

Business Handled as Business

This purely business incident of government was disposed of in a purely business way, and it was largely this episode that led to the formation of a liquidation board for the purpose of uncovering a considerable number of other places in which the same kind of debris from the war exists, and handling them in the way that will be of the best business advantage to the government. This is the kind of thing which in private business is always done well, but in government business is frequently done badly.

Of the same character was Postmaster General Hays's discovery that the business of the post office could be expedited greatly by having the government itself spread out its enormous deposit of second-class matter over the whole day, instead of throwing the entire burden on the post office during two hours of the evening.

All of this sort of thing which composes what may be called the government's housekeeping is the respect in which the cabinet has made its strongest and most agreeable impression. The cabinet is distinctly a business cabinet. The picture they make as they file out of the cabinet meeting is distinctly that of a board of bank directors. There is hardly any touch of the purely "public man," such as Bryan gave to Wilson's first cabinet.

There are more business men in this cabinet than in any previous one for nearly a generation. Mellon, Weeks, Hoover, Davis, Wallace, Fall and Denby have all had strikingly successful careers as business men. Hays has not had a business career, but he is essentially an energetic and organizing personality and no one of the others gives more clearly than he the picture of a "live wire" business man. Hughes, of course is wholly a lawyer, but he is much more the business-man type of a lawyer than other Secretaries of State like Bryan Colby and John Hay.

In the effort to make a record for efficiency in a business way the Cabinet members are handicapped by the difficulty of getting good assistants. As respects appointments and patronage, the public is probably cynical. Recalling what has happened in the beginning of previous administrations, the public probably pictures the waiting rooms of the Cabinet members as filled with party workers looking for their rewards. There is some of this, but very much less than on previous occasions.

Government Jobs Not Attractive

Government jobs are not as attractive as they used to be. The changing value of the dollar has been recognized by business, but not by the government. Business now rewards its workers so much better than the government that a government job is less sought after than in the old days.

A newspaper man who goes from cabinet office to cabinet office and who, in his talks with cabinet members, cannot help overhearing much that is going on over the telephone and other wise gets distinctly the impression that the cabinet is less embarrassed in satisfying the smaller party workers than in getting able men to leave their private businesses and go to work for the government at smaller salaries. The job seekers bore them mildly, but the wish to get able assistants burns in their minds.

You would think it would be easy to get successful business men who have achieved a competence to come to Washington for the sake of distinction and service in the spirit in which the dollar-a-year men came during the war. Many of the cabinet members thought it would be easy and some of them still entertain the hope of achieving it, even after a month of disappointments.

I know that at least one cabinet official has canvassed a large portion of the railroad presidents and vice-presidents of the country in an effort to find one willing to take a post under him. One cabinet member, Will Hays, is avowedly determined, as he says to find fifty-thousand-dollar men to take his five thousand-dollar jobs and manage the parcel post, the postal savings banks, and the other bureaus of the post office as efficiently as they manage their own business.

On small detail that makes life in Washington, in spite of its many attractions, less tempting to men who have won success and assured positions elsewhere is the fact that in the rigidly arranged social hierarchy of Washington the wives of heads of bureaus of the sort to which these men are invited must take positions of distasteful inferiority. Questions of social precedence and the whole mechanism of what is called "society" put a larger figure in Washington than in other American cities. Too much importance is attached to it, and too much of the vitality of hard-worked men is consumed in the formal dinner giving and other functions to which local custom attaches so much sanctity.

Hays ignores Society

One of the new cabinet members Will Hays, has avoided this handicap by announcing that he will neither give nor receive invitations. Sixteen hours a day for work is his formula. To be sure, what is one man's meat may be another man's poison, and no one would deny the reaction of social occasions to the kind of temperament that gets recreation out of them. Not all the cabinet members work sixteen hours a day, but the spirit of drive that comes from hard and sustained effort is one of the most apparent qualities of the present official atmosphere of Washington.

In the field of policies, the cabinet has not made quite so much progress as in the field of administrative vigor. Policies are necessarily of slower growth and call for more reflection. One reason for the smaller achievement in this field lies in that ever-returning cat of trouble, the League of Nations. You start to make a policy about Russia, or about disarmament, or about taxation, or the tariff, and at a certain point you run head on into the fact that policy in this field is necessarily tied with the broader question of policy involved in our foreign relations.

Nearly every approach to policy ends in a blind alley until we have a general policy about the fundamental question of the state of the world as a whole. The time has already passed when according to his well-meant promises, President Harding would have a policy and a mechanism looking to an association of nations. For the delay there are good reasons. One is that in the present state of relations between the Allies and Germany announcement of policy on our part would create embarrassment.

But until that broad question of policy can be grasped aggressively the administration unavoidably will seem less effective in the field of policy than in the field of administrative efficiency.

SHE TOOK HER FRIEND'S ADVICE

Now is in the Best of Health Because she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Mich.—"I was not feeling well for several years and never was able to eat any breakfast and always complained of a headache or tired feeling which at times required me to stop my work and rest. I have never had a physician and never took any medicine for it until years ago when I was recommended to me by a neighbor whom I used to visit frequently. I took four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I am in the best of health and enjoy doing my work every moment of the day. It surely put life and 'pop' into my system."—Mrs. L. M. DARRAS, 46 Howard St., Detroit, Michigan.

It is not always in business that a woman is forced to give up her work on account of ill health. It is quite as often the woman who does her own work at home. When backaches and headaches drive out all ambition, when that bearing-down sensation attacks you, when you are nervous and blue, the one great help for such ailments is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

RANDOM NOTES

SOCIAL : PERSONAL MENTION : CLUBS

It was at the Ritz during luncheon hour of Horse Show week, with women wearing chic and expensive clothes, and pearls and diamonds worth hundreds of thousands of dollars in evidence on every hand. The woman wished that there was not so much sameness about their smartness. They all seemed to use the same perfume! Perfume is like polite stationery. You must buy it from one of two or three places and it must be like your neighbors in the Social Register or you have "not arrived." And arriving is like going to heaven. No! it's more important! Anybody may go to heaven!

In the dressing room two women waited. One of them wore a simple silk dress, the kind mother used to make for the girls, and low heeled pumps, and a floppy hat with a wilted ostrich feather plume upon it. Her cheeks were distinctly not rouged and her hair was not hennaed. "An innocent creature!" decided the woman.

Near her sat a young woman whose skirt was tight and short and who had her knees so crossed that no secrets of her silk stockings remained hid. She wore the highest heels and the lowest cut blouses and she was fearfully and wonderfully made up. She was smoking a cigarette and her bored smile was far more inscrutable than Mona Lisa's. The woman set her down as a hardened woman of the world, and probably no better than she ought to be. What a contrast to the simple lady next her.

And then some one came in who knows everybody. She nodded brightly to the baggage and stared hard at the demure lady in gray. "Who are they?" whispered the curious woman.

Isn't she adorable?" the omniscient one whispered back. "Not out of school yet. She'll inherit twenty millions, but she's keen about uplift and gives huge sums to settlements and has garden parties for slum children out on Long Island. She's just a sweet, unassuming girl."

"She looks it," agreed the woman. "Only I thought she came from a Middle Western village—she's dressed so badly!"

"Badly!" cried the friend. "Why, she's a fashion plate! Those are the handsomest stockings in New York—and I dare say the most expensive!"

The woman felt weak. "I thought you meant the other," she began.

"Oh, her!" scoffed her informant ungrammatically. "She's been divorced twice at least, and she's probably waiting for some other woman's husband this minute and planning to break up a happy home! How she does it when she's such a frum! Mid die West indeed! She was born on Sixth avenue!"—New York Sun.

A record breaker could well be said of the large crowd that attends the American Legion dance Friday night, there being more than one hundred couples in attendance. Harvey's orchestra furnished excellent music and many new dance hits were featured. Among them were "My Budding Rose" and "My Mammy," which were encored repeatedly.

The committee unanimously decided to give another dance next Friday evening, April 8.

A twittering chorus filled the corridors of the fashionable hotel where a women's club was holding its bi-monthly gathering. The reporter felt troubled. He recognized that the buzz of voices signified that the formal program of the afternoon was over and that he had therefore missed the address of the prominent man he had been sent to hear.

Entering the reporter addressed a matron who suggested some social relation with the club function.

"Pardon me, madam," said the reporter, "I represent the Beam. Unfortunately I'm late and I missed hearing Mr. Greatman's speech. Did you hear him?"

"Yes, indeed I did," gushed the imposing matron. "It was a very great honor to the club to have him here."

"Just what was his principal topic?" asked the reporter. "I'd like to get a line on what he talked about."

The enthusiastic matron looked a bit puzzled.

"Really," she admitted after a little pause, "I didn't hear him so very well. You see, I'm one of the club hostesses, so I wanted to be near the door to greet people as they went out. But Mrs. Magnolia will know. She's one of our most intellectual members—lovely little southern woman."

Mrs. Magnolia, finally discovered in the crowd, raised her dazzling brown eyes to the reporter and repeated his question wonderingly:

Hear Mr. Greatman speak? I certainly did. It meant so much to me (emphasizing the "so" eloquently). He is such a wonderful man (stressing the "wonderful" earnestly). I enjoyed hearing him so much."

"And just what did he say?" asked the reporter, sure this time that he had found a genuine listener.

Mrs. Magnolia's eyes darkened. A little cloud settled on her pleasing face.

"What did he say?" she repeated vaguely. "Oh, I'm so sorry I can't stay to tell you, but I promised to meet my husband and I can't keep him waiting."

"But you must really get some one to tell you what he said," added Mrs. Magnolia as she glided gracefully away. "He was so eloquent."

"Mrs. Brightbrain ought to be able to tell you something that he said," advised the matron, who had first taken the reporter in hand. "She's our chairman of entertainment and she was sitting right on the platform."

The reporter tracked down Mrs. Brightbrain, who assured him warmly that she never would forget Mr. Greatman's speech; it was simply thrilling. However, as to details, Mrs. Brightbrain found that she couldn't help him.

The reporter interviewed the treasurer, secretary, all the members of the governing board and delved hit or miss among the crowd of women, all of whom had heard Mr. Greatman but not one of whom could remember a single topic that he had touched upon nor a single remark that he had made.

Then a nice little woman volunteered some help.

"I don't remember anything he said," she admitted frankly, but I brought my little boy with me so that he could test his memory. You see, we're having his memory trained."

"Frankie," she added, turning to her little son, "you tell the gentleman what Mr. Greatman said."

Frankie started off bravely and swung along at an excellent rate until suddenly he came to an abrupt stop.

"Old man," said the reporter heartily, "you're all right. You told me enough to save the day. That's the best speech I've heard Greatman compose."

make before and it isn't worth mentioning anyhow."—New York Sun.

Incompliment to her sister, Mrs. W. L. Lappe, of Newark, Mrs. Fred O. Cline entertained the women of the Thursday Kensington Club and a few favored guests at a luncheon Friday.

It was a very elaborate and beautiful affair, with every detail charmingly arranged.

Twenty-four guests were seated at small tables, daintily appointed and the yellow color note prettily introduced. Individual nut baskets in yellow marked each cover and fastened to their handles were yellow juncos, the favors. Lovely little place cards assigned the guests.

The delicacies of the courses were enjoyed amid merry sociability and a delightful afternoon followed.

Mrs. Cline cordially welcomed the guests in a becoming gown of navy blue taffeta. Mrs. Lappe wore a modish gown of blue crepe de chine, with relief of lace.

Receiving with them were the hostess' mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Darbyshire, gowned in black silk.

Mrs. Joseph I. Taggart and Mrs. Edgar Snyder assisted and Mrs. George Cline, of Seldon, was among the guests.

A quiet wedding of interest to many friends took place at Grace M. E. church at a quarter of two Saturday afternoon, when Rev. Karl B. Alexander united in marriage Miss Ruth L. Water and Mr. Clarence E. Taylor.

Members of the immediate family witnessed the ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Waters and has been for some time bookkeeper in the McMurray coal office. She is pretty and attractive as well as a very capable young business woman. For her marriage she was smartly attired in a tailored suit of blue with spring hat en suite.

The bridegroom the son of Mr. Elsie Taylor, west of town, is a well known young Franklin mechanic with the Ortman Motor Company.

Both young people are popular with a host of friends, who are extending best wishes. They left after the ceremony for a short trip.

Mrs. Nan Gardner, Murray gave a delightful dinner, Friday evening, honoring her mother Mrs. Tom Gardner, who attained her eighty-sixth mile stone on that day, her husband celebrating his eighty-ninth birthday the eighteenth of February.

Seated with the hostess, honor guest and Mr. Gardner were the son Mr. Charles Gardner and wife, Grand son Mr. Tom Evans Murray, and Mrs. Murray and the great grandson, Tom Gardner Murray.

In the evening close friends and neighbors called to extend best wishes and presented the honor guest with gifts of beautiful flowers.

Miss Marie Hagler arrived home the last of the week from Pensacola, Fla., where she spent the winter months.

Miss Ethelyn Morgan is the guest of Miss Ruth Cissna in Columbus, for the week end.

Miss Roxie Stinson and Miss Gertrude Oldham motored to Columbus, Friday evening, for the concert given by John Powell American pianist and same speech I've heard Greatman compose.

Miss Fannie Browning has as her week end guest, Miss Mary Collett of New Burlington, Ohio.

DR. HENRY HERE FOR MEETINGS

Rev. J. Q. Henry, who is to preach to the people of Washington C. H. and vicinity for the next two weeks, arrived on the Saturday afternoon B. & O. train, and will be in readiness for his three sermons Sunday, preaching at Grace M. E. church at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m., and at the First Presbyterian church at 2:30 p. m.

Of Dr. Henry's sermons, Dr. A. M. Courtney, well known minister of central Ohio, says: "His preaching is nearer like that of D. L. Moody than any other I have ever heard. He appeals to both the mind and the heart. His sermons are the outgrowth of years of careful thinking accompanied by deep spirituality."

In addition to the preaching of Dr. Henry there will be an abundance of good singing throughout the meetings. On Sunday evening there will be a list of ninety hymns given to each person in attendance. All will be asked to indicate their three or four favorite hymns. Those which seem to be the favorites of the majority, will be used most in the meetings.

The Methodists and Presbyterians will co-operate fully in the series of meetings, the afternoon meetings on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week being held at the Presbyterian church, together with the meeting of Sunday afternoon. Evening services will be held at the Methodist church.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

FLOG AND BRAND NEGRO BELL BOY OF TEXAS HOTEL

Letters "K. K. K." Branded On His Forehead

(By Associated Press)
Dallas, Texas, April 2.—Police today were investigating the activities of masked men who took Alex Johnson, negro bell boy in a Dallas hotel to a lonely spot south of Dallas late last night, flogged him and then branded with an acid the letters "K. K. K." on his forehead.

Johnson was brought back to Dallas in an automobile and thrown from the machine in front of the hotel where he had been employed.

The party was said to have been composed of well dressed white men. Charges were filed last week against Johnson after police said he had been discovered in the room of a white woman guest at the hotel.

Is Assured That Company Will Be Equipped at Early Date. Company Will Also Get Lockers

For the purpose of bringing about the speedy equipment of his company, Captain Henry Smith, accompanied by First Lieutenant Edward L. Williams and Sergeant Burnett W. Hyer, went to Columbus Friday, where he had a personal interview with Adjutant General Florence and his staff.

Assurance was given Captain Smith that M. Company, Ohio National Guard, will be fully equipped at the earliest possible moment.

The Adjutant General complimented the officers on the rapid organization of the company and the progress which they had made towards a finished military unit.

The Adjutant General also expressed the belief that the legislation before the General Assembly, in which provision is made for National Guard funds, will be passed as it stands and that it will not be "cut".

Plans are going forward for the erection of the armory in this city, it was stated by the officials.

One of the things that Captain Smith asked for was a set of lockers for his men with which to care for their equipment until the armory is erected. These were promised on condition that the men do the work of installation.

FORUM LITERARY SOCIETY GIVES "STOP THIEF"

Broadway Stage Success Cleverly Given by Well Chosen Student Cast.

Capacity Audience Greeted First Night Performance.

The Forum Literary Society's presentation of "Stop Thief" a Cohen & Harris farcical comedy that proved one of the big stage successes, at the high school set a new standard in high school dramatic events and called forth, the most enthusiastic approval of an audience that packed the high school auditorium Friday night.

The play itself is exceptionally good, containing the elements which make for popularity, its exciting plot sustaining interest, its humor and bright lines very taking and a touch of heart interest in the love of the thief for his girl and their purpose to go straight after they had "turned the last trick" and were "spliced".

It was the most pretentious play ever put on by the local high school and the fact that it was presented after only three weeks of training by pupils previously untrained, and with ten to fifteen people on the stage at one time, made its success all the more remarkable.

The cast was admirably chosen and an unusually capable one, and the coaching and stage direction of Mr. Oliver C. Martin, high school science teacher, showed itself exceptionally able.

The first scene presented the living room of the Carr residence and everything staged for the marriage of one of the trio of pretty daughters to a young Englishman. The enthusiasm called forth by a wonderful array of wedding gifts is changed to wild excitement by the mysterious disappearance of the gifts and also bonds and money concealed in the home.

The absent-mindedness of the father and the fear of the bridegroom that he is the kleptomaniac suggested by his friend and physician, lead to a series of highly amusing situations, during which the thief and his pal, the new maid, do some very fast work and almost "get away with it." Everything disappears—the pigeon blood ruby, the diamond bracelet, mother's jeweled ear trumpet, bonds, money, right under the eyes of the panicky bridegroom and the distressed father and family.

The arrival of the police and the frustration of the clever plans of the thief and his team worker was followed by a happy ending in which everybody gets "spliced".

Russell Rine in one of the stellar roles won plaudits galore. He lost himself completely in his part, and played the forgetful father to perfection, his fine work was one of the features of the play.

Miss Portia Brownell playing opposite took the character part of "mother" charmingly, showing much patience with her absentminded spouse, and added to the merriment by always fainting and upsetting her family at the most critical moments.

Oliver Miller and Mary Durant both showed decided histrionic talent in their very clever portrayal of the thief, Jack Doogan, and his girl, Nell. Miss Durant caught the spirit of her part wonderfully and brought to it temperament and the poise of the trained artist. She was very graceful in this difficult part.

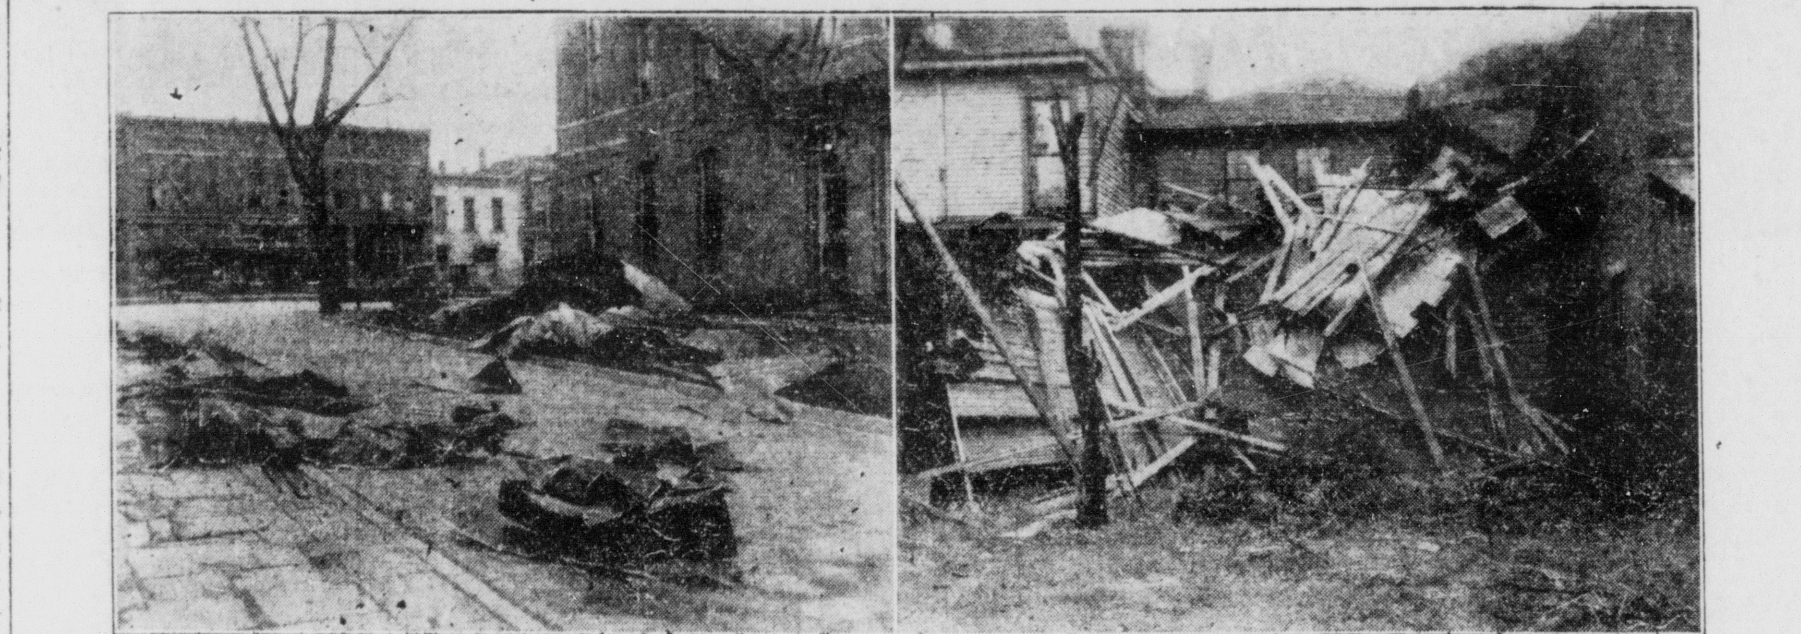

The verdict of the police "A deuced clever chap" applied all around to Oliver Miller, whose portrayal of the thief was decidedly finished and above the ordinary amateur. His splendid voice and perfect naturalness added immensely to the success of his impersonation.

The bride and bridegroom also carried off their roles with much ability. "Miss Florence Bliss as Madge was a typical 'sweet girl bride,' in white satin; and Oliver Tracey extremely good as the bridegroom, typically English, side-burns, monocle and drawl. Young Tracey's role made great demands upon the player's vitality and his "pep" never lagged for a minute, reaching a climax in his frenzied belief that he was in truth the kleptomaniac fear had suggested.

Both the excitable groom and his fair bride did exceptionally good work in the last act.

The bride's sisters, Joan and Caroline, figured prominently in the success of the play. Miss Irene Shultz played the role of Joan with delightful naturalness and grace and was so pretty that it was no wonder she could even charm the peppery Police Sergeant. Miss Alice Frayne as Caroline was adorable, a picture of youth and beauty.

SHOWING DAMAGE DONE WHEN TWISTER HIT GREENFIELD

Some idea of the intensity of the storm which struck Greenfield last Sunday afternoon about four o'clock may be gained from these two views which were taken after the little "twister" had passed.

Loren Stewart was exceedingly good looking and did splendid work as Dr. Willoughby; Edward Lewis was dynamic in his forcefulness and his "pep" and good acting impressed the audience.

Ralph Kearney certainly looked the part of Rev. Splevin in his correct clerical garb; and Carroll Flew was imposing in his impersonation of the detective.

The Police Sergeant, splendidly taken by Ray Snider, with his officers John Deen, Kenneth Sever and Selby Gerstner, added greatly to the humor of the last act, their parts all well acted. Ray put all the "pep" in the world into his role; "Johnny" Deen, came up to the scratch as he always did in athletics and made much of a small part; Severs provided continuous laughter and Gerstner was very handsome in his uniform.

Charles Allen made a striking appearance in the last act as a chauffeur true to form.

The Peppster's Orchestra contributed greatly to the success of the play in popular numbers before the curtain rose and between acts.

The cast was chosen from 150 high school students who volunteered to take part, the committee, Miss Alden, Mr. Martin, and Mr. Harbaugh.

The play will be repeated Saturday night at the auditorium.

The Bowersville High School will present this play next Friday night, all members of the cast here to see the play.

The proceeds go to the purchase of a moving picture machine for the high school.

BOGUS COUSIN OF PRES. HARDING NABBED IN CHICAGO

(By Associated Press)
Chicago, April 2.—Evertt Harding, a candy store owner who was arrested today on charges of impersonating a federal official, tonight was declared by police to have defrauded the Pennsylvania Railroad out of nearly $2000 and to have imposed on leading Chicago clubs and business men by pretending to be a cousin of President Harding, although actually no relation to the chief executive, and as his assistant secretary.

Police say they believed Harding had obtained at least $10,000 from a group of business men by promising to use his influence in obtaining political appointments.

Harding according to the police, found Chicago's leading citizens glib. He took 22 of them to the inauguration in a private car, it was said, and then paid the Pennsylvania railroad with a check for $1918.44 which was returned, according to railroad officials, marked "no funds."

While on this trip Harding became acquainted with a delegation from the Hamilton Club, the chief Republican social organization of the city. He posed before them as a cousin of the president and was promised a life membership in the club, the police said. In return Harding was said to have promised his friends political appointments, telling them that he was to be assistant secretary to the president.

Harding was held in bonds of $5000 for hearing before U. S. Commissioner Lewis F. Mason.

EDUCATOR WHO SLEW SUPERIOR THOUGHT INSANE

(By Associated Press)
Syracuse, N. Y., April 2.—Dr. Holmes Beckwith, educator, former lieutenant in the army, and California bank examiner, who shot and killed his superior, Dean John Herman Wharton at Syracuse University this morning, before committing suicide himself, probably was insane as result of chagrin over losing his position here, according to statements made by the officials and Chancellor James R. Day of the university late tonight.

That Beckwith had premeditated suicide has been established, the instructor having left several letters showing his intention in that respect. At first it was believed that Dr. Wharton had been killed in an unsuccessful attempt to prevent Beckwith's suicide but this theory has been cast aside.

THINGS TO KNOW IN THE SPRINGTIME

THE GREEN FAIRY WITH THE LONG TRAIN

By Ernest Thompson Seton.

(Copyright 1921.)

The Green Fairy with the long train (about 1/2 life size)

Some fairies are Brownies and some are Greenies, and of all that really and truly dance in the moonlight right here in America, Luna Grennie seems the most wonderful, and this is her history.

Once upon a time there was a seed pearl that dropped from the robe of a green fairy. It stuck on the leaf of a butternut tree till one warm day Mother Carey, who knows all the wild things and loves them all, touched it with her magic wand, called Hatch-awake and out of the seed pearl came an extraordinarily ugly little dwarf, crawling about on many legs. He was just as greedy as he was ugly, and he ate leaf after leaf on the butternut tree, and grew so fat that he burst his skin. Then a new skin grew, and he kept on eating and bursting until he was quite big. But he also became wise and gentle, he had learned many things, and was not quite so greedy now.

Mother Carey, the All-Mother, had been watching him and knew that now he was ready for the next step up. She told him to make himself a hammock of rags and leaves, in the butternut tree. When he crawled into it, she touched him with her wand, the very same as the one she used when she sent the Sleeping Beauty into her long sleep. Then that little dwarf went soundly to sleep, hanging in his hammock.

Summer passed; autumn came; the leaves fell from the butternut tree, taking the bundle baby with them, exactly as in the old rhyme.

Rock-a-bye, baby, on the tree-top,
When the wind blows, your cradle will rock;
When the cold weather makes all the leaves fall,
Down tumbles baby and cradle and all.

But the hammock, with its sleeper, landed in a deep bed of leaves, and lay there all winter, quite safe and warm.

Then when the springtime sun came over the hill, Mother Carey came a-riding on the Warm Wind, and waving her wand. She stopped and kissed the bundle baby, just as the Prince did the Sleeping Beauty, and instantly the baby awoke. Then happened the strangest thing. Out of that ragged old hammock there came the most wonderful and beautiful Green Fairy ever seen, with wings and with two trains, and as it came out and looked shyly around, trembling with new life, Mother Carey whispered, "Go to the butternut grove and see what awaits you there."

So away she went. Oh, how easy and glorious it is to fly! She could remember how once she used to crawl everywhere. And through the soft, sweet night she flew, as she was told, straight to the butternut grove. As she came near she saw many green fairies—a great crowd of them—gathered in the moonlight, and dancing round and round in flitting circles, swooping about and chasing each other, or hiding in the leaves. They did not feast, for these fairies never eat, and they drink only honey from flowers. But there was a spirit of great joy over them all. And there were some there with longer head plumes than those she wore. They seemed stronger, and one of them came with a glad greeting to the new Green Fairy; and though she flew away, she was bursting with joy that he should single her out. He pursued her till he caught her, and hand in hand they danced together in the moon light. She was happier than she knew it was possible to be, and danced all night—that wonderful wedding dance. But she was very tired when morning was near, and high in the tree she slept so soundly, that she never noticed that many seed pearls that were clustered on the lining of her robe had got loose and rolled into the crevices of the trunk. There they lay till Mother Carey came to touch them with her magic wand, so each became a crawler-dwarf, then a bundle-baby, and at last a dancing fairy.

But the Green dancer did not know that—she only knew that it was a glorious thing to be alive, and fly, and to dance in the moonlight.

MEMOIR

Florence Rebecca Hess Stuckey was one of five children, born to J. L. and Catharine Hess, and is the fourth one of the five to answer the roll call on High. She was born on a farm about five miles north of Bloomingburg, Ohio, May 12, 1883, and passed to her eternal home from the Hodgson Hospital at Washington C. H., Ohio, where she had gone for an operation, March 21, 1921. Aged 37 years, 10 months, and 9 days.

Miss Hess was united in marriage to Frederick Franklin Stuckey, October 3, 1907 and the years that have intervened have been years of sweet happiness and companionship. One daughter, Margaret Catharine, came to bless and brighten their union.

Mrs. Stuckey has always been of a reverent and religious disposition and when Rev. C. W. Brady was pastor of the church here, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church and remained a faithful member until her death.

She was a woman of beautiful life and character devoted to her home and those she loved. Her kind influence will live in the hearts of those she loved long after the earth has covered her resting place with a beautiful carpet of verdant green. Her kindness and sweet disposition endeared her to her neighbors and friends, and made here a warm place in the hearts of all who knew her.

During all her life she has had rather frail health, and in the last few years has been almost a constant sufferer. Through it all she has been patient and brave and frequently expressed her faith in Christ and her willingness to go if it were his will.

During these years of suffering her faithful husband and her father and mother and her daughter Margaret, together with the other members of her family did all that could be done to relieve her suffering and restore her health, but in spite of all their loving ministrations she quietly fell asleep during the operation which she and her loved ones hoped might prolong her life. Yet we have the blessed consolation that she shall awaken in the brightness of the Father's Glory, and await in loving solicitude the coming of those she loved.

She leaves her loving and faithful husband, her beloved daughter, her faithful father and mother, one brother Raymond Hess and her nephew Theophilus Cooper whom she loved as her own child, and a wide circle of relatives and friends who will cherish precious memories of her until they meet her in the home prepared for all those who love him and do his good will. Until that time he has promised to "abide with us" and bring these loved ones at last to the home above when they shall meet her in glad reunion and immortal glory.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Stuckey and her family desire to express their deep appreciation of the kindness shown them during their sorrow, and to thank all the friends for the beautiful floral offerings, and kindly ministrations.

HUNGARY WILL RELEASE FUNDS

(By Associated Press)

BUDAPEST, (By Mail)—Thirty million kronen belonging to American firms is to be released by the Hungarian government upon representations by the American Commissioner Grant Smith. The money was taken as a 20 percent levy on bank deposits. The question whether the authorities had a right to levy on American capital in Hungarian banks has been long argued.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without gripping, cramping or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. Eat and Sleep.
